*“Is there anything more important than a child?
Every child has the right to health,
to education, to protection,
to tenderness, to life.”*

ETHIOPIA

UNICEF seeks to overcome the neglect of the educational needs of children in the war and drought-stricken regions of Borena, Ogaden, Bale and Eastern Hararghe, where 348,000 refugees and over 874,000 drought-affected people live. A two-part assistance programme will cover (1) training of teachers for war-traumatized and emergency-stricken children, and (2) provision of classroom equipment and materials for 22 primary schools.

SOMALIA

Because of the civil war, destruction of schools and a long-neglected school system, most children have received little or no formal education. 50,000 primary school children will benefit from the expansion of UNICEF's basic education services, through (1) the rehabilitation and reopening of 90 primary schools, (2) providing 150 primary schools with newly collected and printed textbooks, and emergency standard education kits, and (3) training 500 primary school teachers and educational administrators. Special efforts will also be made to meet the needs of children in especially difficult circumstances, such as street children, orphans, and war-traumatized children.

SUDAN

This UNICEF project will provide basic education and stability to approximately 50,000 primary-level pupils in displacement camps, where two-thirds of children are out of school. In some locations the enrollment rate is less than one per-cent, with enrollment of girls less than half that of boys. In emergency areas, teachers are unpaid, and children are traumatized and malnourished. Rehabilitation and construction of new classrooms, and provision of educational supplies, school latrines, handpumps and storage tanks are all part of this programme.
